P-Noy says JBC 'unfair,' will still pick CJ from list

By TJ Burgonio

'AM I SATISFIED? Personally, 'Yes and,' President Aquino told reporters, referring to the Judicial and Bar Council list of nominees that did not include the administration candidate, Justice Secretary Leila de Lima.

Nonetheless, the President said he would pick a new Chief Justice from the JBC list before the expiration of the 90-day deadline set by the Constitution. That will be on Aug. 27.

The new Chief Justice will take the place of Retired Corina, who was approached by the House of Representatives in December for a visit.

STATE OF DISCONTENT, DISBELIEF President Aquino tells reporters he was not satisfied with the JBC short list of candidates for Chief Justice and the claim of convicted murderer Baldo Go that he was kidnapped. The President made both statements during an impromptu interview at the State Dining Room of Malacanan on Friday.

GMA doc fears 'worst'

P-Noy: How can you be kidnapped in Bilibid?

By Jerome Aking and TJ Burgonio

PRESIDENT AQUINO and Justice Secretary Leila de Lima made one thing clear yesterday—they were still not swallowing word after word Baldo Go's claim that he was abducted from New Bilibid Prison (NBP).

"How can you be kidnapped inside Bilibid?" Mr. Aquino asked. "How could the kidnappers get in there?"

De Lima was more blunt.

"There is one theory that he was not really at the minimum security compound," she said, referring to Go's claim that he was abducted by four men while he was about to return to the NEP's main compound. "There's information that he had been gone for two days and one night. When his absence was exposed, they were constrained to come up with this abduction story."

"The NBI (National Bureau of Investigation) does not believe his version," De Lima told reporters. "But we don't want reporters."

FORMER President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo must seek foreign medical attention as soon as possible as her condition took a turn for the worse, her doctor said yesterday.

But Malacanan said all means must be exhausted to get treatment here for Arroyo, who is facing electrical seizures, breath of ethics and plunder charges.

Dr. Roberto Aronson, a cardiologist at Makati Medical Center (MMC), said the shifting parts of a metal brace on the cervical spine of Arroyo had become more "progressive and aggressive."

The condition was creating Arroyo, now a Pampanga representative in Congress, increasing difficulty in breathing and swallowing.

Asked by reporters if the condition was deadly, Aronson replied, "Yes."

Aronson ordered Arroyo discharged yesterday despite her worsening condition, but advised her to get immediate surgery abroad.

"She has no choice," Aronson said.

Abalos posts bail; DOJ surprised

By Jerome T. Gamal and Jocelyn R. Uy

THIS COMMISSION on Elections (Comelec) said it was not surprised by a court decision to release on bail former Comelec Chair Benjamin Abalos. The Psephy City judge cited weak evidence and Abalos' advanced age.

But the Department of Justice (DOJ) said the ruling came much too quickly, as state prosecutors filed their comment on Abalos' bail petition only last Thursday.

Judge Jesus Mupas of the 112th branch of the Psephy City Regional Trial Court allowed Abalos, who is accused of electoral sabotage, to go temporarily free on P1-million bail.

Comelec Chair State Representative J. Aronson, however, said the Comelec had a strong case against Abalos.

"This is the same with the case of Aronzo," Brillantes said, referring to the electoral

US blogger accuses Sotto: 'Lying thief'

By Jocelyn R. Uy

THE PURVENANCE in the Commission on Elections (Comelec) election, outages in Baguio City may be luxurious but they're not overpriced, Comelec Chair Rene Brillantes Jr. said in response to Sen. Alan Cayetano's charges made during a budget hearing on Wednesday.

Whistle-blower Jun Lozada welcomes graft probe

WHISTLE-BLOWER Jun Lozada positively welcomed the filing of graft cases against him at the Sandiganbayan in connection to the bid fight on the allegedly notorious NARI-23 deal during the Arroyo administration.

"I welcome the opportunity to shed light on these issues that were part of a larger number of transactions since that period on by GMA (GMA Management Agency) and have solemnly as a result of my decision to testify on the truth behind the NARI-23 deal. It was part of a package of bribes and kickbacks I was subjected to take the deal," Lozada said in a statement.

Lozada said all his actions during his time with the government had all been above board. "I am open to prosecuting it in conjunction with the issue. I am confident that the truth shall be known during this period of exposure under the P-Noy administration," he added.

"My documentation has not survived and I am open to collaborate with the proper authorities in bringing this case to its rightful conclusion," he said.

On Wednesday, the Office of the Prosecutor filed two cases of graft against Lozada at the Sandiganbayan for alleged misuse of powers while he was president and chief executive officer of the now-defunct Philippine River Corp. (PRC) in 2007 and 2008. Lozada was charged with violation of the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act, or Republic Act No. 3048, for having used public land to his brother and a private firm which he had "a direct or indirect financial proprietary interest."

In the first case, the Sandiganbayan said that Lozada had unlawfully awarded the lease contract of a piece of land under the PRC's Laguna Fishing program to Transmar Ocean, a private corporation in which he and his wife, Mrs. Volina, had been appointed to act for and in its behalf to operate financial transactions.

It said Lozada committed the offense while in the performance of his official functions as PRC head, taking advantage of his position, without due to the twisting of leasehold rights to qualified beneficiaries.

AT A GLANCE, he looks like a typical 11-year-old boy who loves to watch cartoon shows, read fantasy books, and eat good food.

But L-ey, 11, is no ordinary boy. He is the youngest Filipino boy Scout to reach the summit of the 4,091-meter Mount Kinabalu in Sabah, Malaysia, and the tallest summit in Southeast Asia.

After a lengthy climb, the 11-year-old boy Scout from SHS-ADC reached the top of Kinabalu on June 6.

Aside from L-ey, the team members were: August Gomez, 15; Dai Lito, 15; Timothy Millares, 15; Roy Razon, 16; May Balde, 11; Elmer Trono, 14; Bob Abellano, 15; Cesar Hernandez, 16; and Hannah

Jerome said he wasn't surprised when he learned that his son pushed on even when his teammates wanted him to rest and stop the climb to Kinabalu's peak. After all, L-ey always gives his 100 percent in anything that he does.

School activities

This week is usually full on for L-ey. From Monday to Thursday, he is preoccupied with his duties as president of Alpha Society Grade School Students Council of SHS-ADC and student leader of the school's Boy Scout unit.

Although he has two sports practices, L-ey studies his lessons on weekdays from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. from Monday to Thursday.

Despite his academic activities, he continues to do well academically. He is a constant gold medalist for science and the top scorer of his batch since first grade, when he always represents his school in competitions. He ranks second out of more than 200 students in his grade level.

L-ey acknowledged that he had little time to play. "In fact, I had only one day of summer vacation because I had to wait for the last day of my last year right now," he said. "I still love to play PBA, though, whenever I get time."

Family support

He said it was also difficult for him to leave because he has many activities to attend in. Fortunately, his parents help him balance his activities and make sure that he will have time to study.

It is also a big factor for his family because his younger brother is in high school, and his parents, "I am very proud of him because they always have to conduct me," he added.

Jerome explained that he and his brother made sure that they could support any activity that could help build L-ey's character.

One of these are the Boy Scouts of the Philippines where the goal was to support himself by teaching the Boy Scouts teamwork and perseverance.

The climb was steep. They had to use ropes for support. The other four boys of "very hard climb," the team finally made it.

"To reach the summit," the group took photos, displaying the flag of SHS-ADC and the Boy Scouts of the Philippines. They stayed for a few minutes to catch the breathtaking view.

As he was walking down, a realization hit L-ey. His mission was great. The challenge was to be even be overcome by taking one small step at a time.

"It's better to move slowly to get things done, than to think of great things and not do anything at all," L-ey said. The boy wants to be an engineer and build houses for the poor.

The CHED Closure Order of the three degree programs at the master level of the judicial system. The chair of CHED Chairman Patricia Licuanan said there is already "bounty" in her Order is only on the master level within the confines of CHED. Licuanan is only trying to block the BSA, MBA, Ph.D. in Management, which her technical panel did not observe or make any findings on its "efficiency, quality, and relevance in providing educational services." IAME's Ph.D. in Management is the "leader in the industry" as shown by the fact that a dean of DLSU, two assistant deans of Ateneo Graduate School of Business, presidents, senators, deans, directors, and professors of other colleges and universities obtained their Ph.D. in Management degree from IAME, not member diplomats, ACBS and World Bank officers and country managers of multinational corporation.

The irony in this case is that Atty. Emmanuel T. Santos, Ph.D., IAME founding president, chairman-CEO, was a hostile witness in the Senate impeachment hearings of CJ Renato Corona. Neil Santos is an original founding member of Ninoy Aquino's LABAN 21 and the one assigned by Ninoy to announce all over Manila the historic Ninoy Raging at April 8, 1986 during the struggle under martial law to restore freedom and democracy to the Filipino nation and the Philippines. Their lifelong kinship is the right of the presidency of Pinoy's collaborators and sympathizers of the martial law regime.

IAME still open and operating CHED order to close 3 degrees, not IAME as school, no finality yet IAME appeal still pending in SC

The International Academy of Management and Economics (IAME) (www.iame.edu) is a non-profit, non-governmental, non-religious, and non-political organization. It is the only innovative international degree program recognized by the World Education Service (WES), New York, USA, by granting equivalency to IAME international degree programs as equivalent to similar degrees granted by accredited U.S. universities.

WES, the oldest and most prestigious equivalency organization, is used by the U.S. and Canadian governments, multinational enterprise corporations in processing applications for job-responsing foreign diplomats, BSA, MBA, and Ph.D. in Management of IAME have been declared by WES as equivalent to similar degrees granted by accredited U.S. universities and all were employed by the U.S. and Canadian governments, and many multinational corporations as country managers. Each graduate has to apply to WES for equivalency individually, not the school.

The international degrees of IAME is a continuation/extension of the International Baccalaureate (IB) offered by foreign schools like International School, British, British and Euro-schools. The IAME global degrees are International BBA, International MBA, International Ph.D. in Management, International Ph.D. in Political Economy and Geopolitics. Foreign students may be awarded also once their equivalency will come from WES USA.

The appeal of IAME to the Supreme Court is kept alive by the IAME Motion for Reconsideration filed on July 30, 2012 and the Supplemental Motion for Reconsideration filed on August 18, 2012 anchored on the constitutional provision granting jurisdiction to the Supreme Court to settle/adjust ruling issues limited to questions of law. On July 4, 2012, the 3rd Division of the Supreme Court issued a resolution appointing Executive Secretary Pacifico Garcia and his legal assistant from grave abuse of discretion for refusing to uphold the supremacy of the Constitution granting the President of the Philippines control over all departments, bureaus and offices under a section of R.A. No. 1752 creating CHED and a section of the New Administrative Code. The 3rd Division said for dismissal only on procedural ground to force IAME to bring its appeal to the Court of Appeals but did not rule on the merits of the case. But, the CHED Closure Order is a violation of the right to property of IAME over its government-recognized BBA, MBA, and Ph.D. in Management degrees by not observing administrative due process required by the Internal Regulations for Private Schools and Section 1, Article III, Bill of Rights of the Constitution. The CHED Closure Order was the final step, not the closure of IAME as a school. On July 31, 2012, IAME received an Order from the 3rd Division of SC requiring it to submit a photograph of the CHED closure. IAME submitted to the SC on August 6, 2012.

Woman to replace recalled Cambodian envoy to PH

By Tara Quezon

GENEVA—References between the Philippines and Cambodia will continue after all, with Phnom Penh sending a "high-ranking" diplomat to Manila to replace the ambassador a month earlier by ending remarks that did not bring new relations in the West Philippine Deal (West-Phnom Deal).

Foreign Secretary Albert Del Rosario announced yesterday that the Cambodian foreign minister had selected a female diplomat to replace the late Sereyheath, the ambassador recalled earlier this month after losing a letter accusing the Philippines and Vietnam of "dirty politics" in pushing for a unified stand by the association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) on their territorial dispute with China in the West Philippine Sea.

Female diplomat

The Cambodian foreign minister provided little details, but Del Rosario said Phnom Penh has chosen "a lady that's quite high in the ministry" to replace Sereyheath, who reportedly left Manila earlier this week.

"She's of excellent personal rank, she has the law to present an appoint," Del Rosario said, referring to the document that accusing Manila of invasion present to host countries as diplomatic security.

The receiving country has the discretion whether to accept an appointment, but Del Rosario said he saw no problem about the document.

Recall

Cambodia recalled the Sereyheath shortly after Manila presented his remarks accusing the Philippines and Vietnam of presenting the ASEAN to take what he described as an "unfair and non-negotiable" position on the West Philippines Sea dispute.

The Sereyheath's letter was published in a Manila newspaper in response to Foreign Affairs Undersecretary for Policy and Strategy's article "What happened in Phnom Penh," which sought to shed light on ASEAN's failure to make a customary joint statement after a 45th-Anniversary ministerial meeting in Phnom Penh in July.

Del Rosario's article was published in a Manila newspaper.

So far, strongly worded letters from Sereyheath blamed the failure on the inaction of the Philippines and Vietnam to have their dispute with China mentioned in the joint statement.

Moving on

The letter was published just as the Philippines was trying to move on after the failure in Phnom Penh.

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) announced that Sereyheath and his family has a visa-dropping an explanation in the remarks that he never showed up at the DFA. He instead sent his second assistant, Yee Chhannarith.

DFA officials earlier said that they were expecting Philippine-Cambodian relations would remain strong despite the incident.

No work slowdown, airport protesters vow

MINDORO, Cebu and Zamboanga officials assigned to the Office of the International Airport (OIA) recently issued the public that they will not neglect their duties and their protesting "silent protest" against the decision of the Department of Transportation (DOTr) to suspend the operations of OIACT to suspend their operations.

"We work here because there's no work elsewhere," Immigration Office Association of the Philippines president Francisco Trinidad said yesterday.

For the second day, immigration, customs and quarantine officers at the in Terminal 1 continued to display police officers on the shores of their union, at Terminal 2 and 3, the officers were not and the union.

Justice Secretary Leila de Lima said she was assisted by Immigration Commissioner Francisco David A. Last and the Department of the Interior in Lima said she was assisted that immigration personnel might be taken in their duties, especially with the President's order of an immediate national government personnel together who might try to reach out to the country.

The said immigration employees and other government personnel in the airport have "very mild reactions" and they would be "serious consequences" if they should take their jobs, stage a strike or do some other work.

"They have the right to an expression and to express their activities but as we say and know, they have to right to do their jobs and do some other work, otherwise, that would be a problem to the government and the country," he said.

He said the biggest concern would be needed through dialogue.

The officers complained about the OIACT decision regarding their suspension beginning August 11, after the decision of the Board of Airline Operators (BAO) to suspend the operations of OIACT.

The immigration and quarantine officers and airlines say they would not accept the suspension of their operations, and they are now serving international passengers.

The airline executives, however, said the payment for overtime was no longer profitable after the personnel agencies have increased its labor work shifts at Manila.

Jailhouse rock

EVEN AFTER Presley with his rock 'n' roll imagination would have found it a stretch to record after Robbin' Go disappearing from the New Bilibid Prison (NBP) Tuesday evening and materializing on Wednesday night, claiming that he was kidnapped along with his wife and three children from under the watch of his jailers, taken to a house in Boracay, and given the score of his life until he was released after supposed payment of ransom (claim denied by his wife). When a headline says:

EDITORIAL

The magazine has left the NBP (Philippine National Police, and Bureau of Corrections (INOC)) looking like a conspiracy of silence. The wonder is that top officials have managed to maintain a straight face despite the disgraceful episode. NBP superintendent Richard Schwabinger said Go was considered an "escapee," but expressed puzzlement as to why he would flee given that he was scheduled for release next year on parole. But Cor Director Generalissimo has made himself scarce after issuing statements that Go had escaped and was not abducted. Of course, the statements from prison officials are self-serving. They would rather have Go as an escaped convict rather than a victim of abduction because it would put the mass of the blame on him. But either way, they have sunk deeper into the mire of their incompetence. Hadn't they come up with a plan to prevent Go's escape and his abduction?

Malabang has denied the Department of Justice and National Bureau of Investigation to look into Go's disappearance. But INP Director Generalissimo Barotano has expressed interest in the case because of the jailbreak and alleged abduction, which are both police matters. He has contradicted the escape theory explaining that pieces of evidence recovered by the police were consistent with Go's kidnapping claim. The car that was supposedly used in the abduction, owned by Clemente Jr., Go's brother and personal name, was found in Marikina by local police only on Thursday. An escapee who was found in the car, consistent with Go's statement that his abduction had been done by him. Go also said he was led by the back of his head by one of the abductors, medical personnel have tended to this injury.

Go is afflicted with color vision and has a colony being trapped in his prison. This factor is among those being cited for the supposed impossibility of his escape. Still, his disappearance is nothing new. Formerly, he was imprisoned for killing college student Elton Magana in a fit of mad rage in July 1991, he has been doing time at the NBP for 18 years. He escaped from the NBP provincial jail on Nov. 1, 1993, days before his sentencing, but was recaptured. A "living-out" sentence, he has reportedly been going in and out of the NBP compound since without authorities from the justice secretary. It is said that he and his family reside in the vicinity of the NBP to tend to his money-lending business which has his office in Marikina City. In Marikina City, he has a house and a car. He has a thriving used-car enterprise directly connected to his money-lending, and is engaged in buy-and-sell activities, the most recent involving homicide plots.

It's common knowledge that VIP prisoners in the NBP enjoy certain privileges. His disappearance happened more than a year after former Marikina City Antonio Leyva's escape from the NBP. Leyva, who was sentenced to life in prison for killing his long-time friend and aide in 2009, was arrested outside a building he owns in Marikina City. That escape prompted Justice Secretary Leila de Lima and the Interior to implement reforms in the NBP including the closing of "VIP prisoners' private quarters and the restoration of "living out" privileges for some inmates.

But what's new is that Go was spotted out of jail purportedly by kidnapping-investigation sources said Go's supposed abduction could be related to his money-lending business. The story goes that among those who owe him are private officials themselves, who have been complaining about the high interest rate he collects from borrowers. In fact, the spent utility vehicles were parked outside his home but were actually "repossessed" by him from borrowers who had failed to make good on their loans. The plot thickens.

"Imagine, kidnapped right in the NBP?" exclaimed De Lima. "Only in the Philippines!" We can only agree: From prison is more fun in this country.

'Martilyo' gangmen got P30M 'Taxi' served as getaway car

By James T. Geril

THE SUSPECTS in Thursday's brazen shopping mall robbery in Pasay City got away with a P30-million loot and escaped by getting into a taxi cab, the city's police chief said yesterday.

The four robbers who attacked Sun-binding supermarket on the third floor of Metropolitan mall may have also bought their "taxi" glass cabinets containing jewelry—in the store shopping center before proceeding to their target, according to Senior Supt. Melchor Reyes.

"We believe they bought the pipes in the mall," Reyes told the Inquirer in an interview. "But I'm wondering how they were able to bring them back in."

To pull off the 3 p.m. heist, one of the robbers held the supermarket's customer security guard at gunpoint while the others then emptied the display cabinets with their pipes, he said.

Robbers using such methods have been known in local retail shops as "martilyo" (thieves) gangmen.

One of them apparently suffered a leg as released by blood stains on the broken glass, Reyes said.

Quoting a report from the supermarket, Reyes said the stolen jewelry amounted to about P30 million. He said he had asked "hundreds" to submit a list of the stolen items for cross-verification.

The suspects fired shots in the air to scare the people inside the shopping, and another as they escaped in the hallway, the police official said.

The chase ended near the crowded mall, preventing mall guests from giving chase. Metropolitan is also parked as it is connected to both MRT-Luzon Station and LRT-3 Station.

MRT operations were briefly suspended because of the commotion.

Reyes added that based on experience across the country, he said a "taxi" is complete theft escape.

The Pasay police yesterday also released dispatches of the suspects based on descriptions given by the supermarket clerk, the security guard, and some security personnel located outside the mall.

COP-GUARD A COKE, BUT NOT THE CRIMES One of the policemen who responded to Thursday's robbery at Metropolitan mall in Pasay City apparently had time to grab some refreshment long after the suspects made their getaway. JOYCE REYES

Bidding, negotiation with Trans-Asia Oil unsuccessful

By Amy R. Rana

THE STATE-RUN Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management Corp. yesterday said the negotiations on the sale of four diesel-fired power barges failed anew after Trans-Asia Oil and Energy Development Corp. was not able to match the reserve price for all the facilities.

According to PSALM position and CEO Francisco S. Linares, A. Trans-Asia Oil decided not to match the reserve price and that the difference made the offer presented by the Manila-based company was "adequate."

Trans-Asia Oil quoted a price of P24.83 million for Power Barge 101, and 102, P1 million for Power Barge 3 and P50.13 million for Power Barge 4, for a total of P76.96 million. PSALM, however, did not disclose the reserve price for the barges.

This was the third time that PSALM has attempted to sell the power barges on island.

The first bidding held in May this year was considered a failure after PSALM received only one offer from ACEN Power Corp., a joint venture between the Ayala group, AC Energy Holdings and Trans-Asia Oil.

The second bidding was held yesterday but was declared a failure after receiving only one offer, this time from Trans-Asia Oil. PSALM was reporting two other groups in island offers, namely First Gas Marine Energy Inc. and Lateral Energy and Development Corp.

PH, Singapore air negotiations stalled

Talks to resume after 6 months

By Pamela C. Harrison (UK)

THE GOVERNMENTS of the Philippines and Singapore failed to reach a new deal this week to increase flights between the two countries amid rising demand due to surging regional tourism.

Following two days of negotiations this week, air pilots from both countries agreed to resume negotiations on fresh flight restrictions for passenger and cargo traffic after six months.

"The parties could not agree on the outstanding issues for now," Chif, secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (UBA), said in a statement. "The UBA is still working on the issues."

The CEA heads the Philippine ad panel, which is made up of representatives from the departments of tourism, foreign affairs, and transportation, and communications.

Negotiations between the local air panel and 44 Singaporean negotiators were held a further 11 days (Wednesday to Thursday).

The Philippines wants to boost its trade with vigorously expanding, including Singapore. In the top of the ASEAN's priority list are South Asian neighbors South Korea, Japan, and China. The next line on the list is Australia, the United Arab Emirates, Malaysia and Brazil.

South Korea, the United States, China and Japan are the biggest sources of tourists visiting the Philippines. Earlier, the Philippine air panel signed a new bilateral Air Services Agreement (ASA) with Seoul, increasing flights between South Korea and the Philippines by 50 percent.

DTI pushes automation of permits, licensing

By Nina T. Chikandiro

THE DEPARTMENT of Trade and Industry (DTI) is pushing stakeholders to go for the automation, not just the assembly, of the government's business permits and licensing system (BNP 3).

"We are confident in saying that we have made considerable headway in RPLS implementation, but we are not stopping there. We want to see local governments move from up to the next level from RPLS to RPLC," Trade and Industry Secretary Gregory L. Domingo said in a statement.

As of June 30, 746 local governments (municipalities) have streamlined their HHS. Out of these 1,235, 421 of the 480-target LHOs were included in the program. The remaining 517 LHOs were not part of the set target, according to HHS documents.

"This is part of the marketing process to improve the business environment and make it easier for our constituents and others to learn our products and services," Thompson said.

The BPR includes the number of steps, applications forms and signatures needed to launch new private applications to encourage small and urban enterprises and those within the informal economy to register (doing so, Drawings said, would give them legal protection and increase their contribution to the economy).

In a separate report, the EIU said small and micro enterprises also employed 54.2 percent of the workforce and contributed 35.7 percent of the total value added in the manufacturing industry. The size of the small and micro-enterprises sector gives leverage to push for a cottage industry Philippines and to target the drivers area that is more with SMEs, EIU said.

Early this year, the OCS and the Department of Interior and Land Government (DILG) announced a joint WFLS Push Plan for 2013-2018, which contained the revised number of target LGAs. By 2018, the target LGAs to comply with WFLS standards rose up to 1,650 cities and towns, respectively. The increase in target was in compliance with President Aquino's instruction to speed the coverage of the WFLS program.

The ICI and the OIA searched the nation, with the assistance of HPLJ investigators, in August 2010 and issued a press circular on the guidelines to implement the standards in processing Russian permits and licenses in order to achieve uniformity.

Bad habits, overdev't caused Metro floods, say analysts

By Teresa R. Salazar

THIS TIME, real estate analysts agree with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's assessment, Jose Maria Lozano, chief executive officer of the environmental group Worldwide Fund for Nature (WWF) Philippines, was quoted by the Business last Aug. 13, as saying "Filipinos, not the monsoon rains, are to blame for the damage that paralyzed the metropolitan area of 14-million residents last week." The Business article also cited Tin as saying that "the latest disaster is by the Philippines was a result of an unforeseen and rare combination of natural and man-made factors that unfortunately had not been anticipated."

Steven and inmate leader Boston E. Cruz, a civil engineer who resides in Marlboro, said he "billy-eggs" with their obscenity, but said this would be just "one of several factors causing these illnesses."

The example, now building and development tends to leave areas and open spaces, which point to more resources to the surface that needs to flow to the existing isolated drainage system that gets clogged because of improper waste disposal, or sometimes intentionally clogged by the surrounding neighborhood making a fire prone problem area and of their being unsanitary flooded areas."

Barbara M. Korman (E), senior program director for soil water and senior adviser for Wang+Bernstein-Bedman Advisory, and "The subject of overdevelopment is now described as a 'virus and potential danger' and must no longer be ignored."

Question 7

Soriano said, "We are no longer hiding an elephant in the forest. Growth is important, but within the natural resources of a given area. In Mexico, Manila and the expanded NCR, with a population base of close to 17 million, overdevelopment is the danger growing closer to our local environment due to what inevitably impact our quality of life."

He added: "As property stakeholders, we are not providing a reasonable and concerted support to make every development, every piece compliant to environmental standards. The consequences of decades of unplanned, rapid growth and poor land use man-agencies are victims: increased traffic congestion, crowded schools, worsening air and noise pollution, slumping parking spaces, increased flooding, wildlife habitat destroyed (because of that has been left in the street), higher taxes and deteriorating infrastructure.¹⁷

Julian "Gormy" Collins, Microsoft's assistant director for volunteer and advisory services and head of consultancy and research, noted:

"While some real estate developers have again been put in a bad light, I think that some actors have unfairly put the blame on this sector. Bad public planning and management is the culprit, and real estate developers wouldn't build on a site if they didn't get the permits. Thus they got some praise is another story altogether."

Grove explained that "the effects of climate change, whether caused by man or nature, is apparent in the state of flooding that we are experiencing, that urban development should be more responsible." Grove suggested that one way to do this is to inject green building strategies into the development. He explained that stormwater management strategies can be employed, such as building retention and detention ponds to control nonpoint runoff before it goes to the public wastewater system. These panels and bioscience can be installed in horizontal development to act as monitors as well as effective management control.

"One may notice that it floods to the water right away even when it doesn't seem to take that much. This is because there is one much impervious material on the ground, such as concrete and asphalt. Misleading these impervious surfaces to maintain porous piling blocks can be substituted so that water can be absorbed by the soil underneath," Caviness said.

Obstacles don't pattern

Soriano suggested that the government and stakeholders must now re-think and revitalize development patterns that are obsolete, with some doing "back to the real" of World War II. The Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HDCC) must use compact developers to improve developmental programs inside Metro Manila and encourage "inner growth" initiatives to city centers compromised by overdevelopment. Government must do more seriously "walk the talk" on issues related to urban development, less vehicle dependence, transit plans and tourism programs in the reinforcement of zoning and transportation laws.

Crus added that even with a good drainage system, the water needs to flow in the works is manual waterways which is cited because of inefficient water channeling and non cover (drainage system) because of illegal settlements and illegal encroachment on waterways.

"But please look at the mountains here every because of logging, legal or illegal, subdivision developments, and mining. Because of less trees in the mountains, more water comes down to the rivers. Coming down with the water are minerals, soils and waste that will contribute to the siltation and clogging of the riverways," Cravens said.

He urged readers to use the cream of "these causes" by opening Google.

In the Mississippi Floodway, for example, a closer look will show no threats in the spirit of the man-made canal. A closer look will show further that there are laughing potentials that may soon become, but during critical flooding situations, their being in the waterway adds to the problem by increasing water flow.

"a civil engineering device, an apron is 'any device for protecting a surface of earth from the action of moving water, a platform on which the water flows over a dam."

MANILA (UP) are quick to blame many factors that caused the flooding. This includes erratic weather, extreme weather conditions caused by climate change.

Other factors are rapid urbanization and urban land reclamation that make the metropolitan areas prone to overflowing floods. The high concentration of population in the National Capital Region means more people, more consumption and more solid wastes.

However, not many realize that as consumers, all of us are already responsible for the problem of flooding.

In Metro Manila, at least six thousand tons of garbage is generated daily by 11 million people. This means we have an annual per capita waste generation of about 400 pounds in Metro Manila.

The Island News has 1,000 to 1,200 tons of waste generated daily, including plastic, garbage, and other waste.

In the United States, daily solid waste generated per person is 4.5 pounds. In the Philippines, it is 1.5 pounds. In the United States, it is 1.5 pounds. In the Philippines, it is 1.5 pounds.

Endangered coral reefs

Coral reefs are called the rainforests of the sea because they provide sheltering homes and food to marine life. They need temperatures of at least 18 degrees Celsius to grow. They are vulnerable to pollution, climate change, and human activities. They are also being destroyed by climate change.

NECK-DEEP floods inundated parts of Metro Manila's urban areas, paralyzing traffic.

Megacities have no other way to go but 'green'

By Theresa S. Samson

THE MASSIVE floods that recently devastated parts of Metro Manila and its neighboring provinces will not be the last of its kind.

In fact, a report released recently by the Asian Development Bank titled "Key Indicators for Asia and the Pacific 2012," has warned that some 3.7 million of the urban population in the Philippines is natural vulnerable to inland flooding, while some 6.8 million people are vulnerable to coastal flooding.

The report likewise cited Quezon City as among the Top 10 Asian Cities at risk to inland flooding, putting in a potential peril some 2.9 million of its residents.

Unfortunately, this vulnerable city to flooding is expected to become increasingly not only in the Philippines but also in a number of countries in the Asia-Pacific region due to rapid urbanization—millions of people migrating from the cities and further increasing the already high population densities in these areas.

Challenges

Asia has seen unprecedented urban population growth but this has been accompanied by increasing stress on its resources. The challenge now is to put in place policies which will ensure that rapid and further the development of green technology and green urbanization," still chief economist Ching-Feng Shiao said in a statement.

Since the '90s, Asia has been increasing at a faster rate than anywhere else, with the region already home to almost half of all the world's city dwellers. In just over a decade, it will have 21 of 27 megacities worldwide, and over the next 10 years another 1.1 billion people are expected to join Asia's already swollen urban ranks, the report said.

The report showed that Manila is also expected to become one of these so-called megacities by 2025.

However, that forecasted exponential surge at a point, a sharp rise in pollution, rising crime rates and widening economic and social inequalities which are causing rapid environmental degradation.

Dismal

Slowly, slowly, as urban centers decline, cities, which if left unchecked could become a total anarchy, could reach 30.2 million people by 2025, a level which would have disastrous consequences for both Asia and the rest of the world.

The Philippines and its neighbors in the Asia-Pacific region must therefore act now to give the way for green, to move towards cities, to cities that are "green and sustainable" and not "degraded and degraded."

This view, it is no longer enough for the people to be planning the concept of "green cities" within 10 years of urbanization.

As the ADB had put it, going green means "building better, faster, in safe areas, involving in design and build better infrastructure."

This premise was similar to action of the ADB recommends that would encourage urban planning and architecture to be forward to the national government years ago, when he had sought to make Metro Manila and other cities in the country less vulnerable to disasters.

In his letter to President Aquino in 2010, Paderne stressed the need not only to make the buildings safer, earthquake resistant, flood proof and fire proof, but also to improve the roads, open spaces and parks.

Green urbanization path

People, the highlighting challenge that urbanization poses in government, there is hope," according to the ADB. "Asia must follow a green urbanization path by increasing policies that help improve efficiency and conservation of resources and promote the use of new technologies and sustainable energy," the report said.

Many countries have already begun diversifying their energy sources to include re-

Once in a Blue Elephant

Filipinos tend to say "thigh" when we mean "thai". (Silent 'h')... But that was not what the author went there to learn

The 1 and photos by Joe Morales

RIDING the Bangkok Sky-train, I had met in on many occasions a lovely structure with deliciously decorated awnings, obviously from a different age. I would eventually find out that it housed a well-known institution—the Blue Elephant Cooking School.

I received a call to a class for an experience studying in such distinguished premises.

I like many Filipinos, have long been in love with Thailand, but, we are usually unaware that we don't pronounce the word "thai" quite correctly.

This point was made clear to me one day on the train with a group of friends from different parts of the world. When the conversation turned to where we would go for dinner that evening, I piped up: "I think that I would like some 'thai'."

Everyone laughed. I was finally pointed out a physician from Boston said: "I wouldn't mind having some 'am' meat!"

It was only then that I understood what has always been a source of amusement for others: my mispronunciation of the word "thai" as "thai".

Senior

The other lesson that is often raised is why Thai food is so popular all over the planet while our own cuisine is not.

Numerous theories have been advanced to account for this. Someone even said that the Thai government will provide material resources to anyone who is interested. I have never visited, but the prospect is certainly tempting. How to not let this side of the coin?

With so many more questions to resolve, I decided to go to the land of the smile... as should I say by the night? The next time I was in Bangkok, I enrolled my application in a cooking course at the Blue Elephant, I was promptly accepted.

On the appointed day I took the Sky-train to my school, getting off at the Bangkok station. Entering the grounds, I

Central Japan's lush greenery, mountain views, well-preserved history and warm hospitality will take your breath away

MOST of the stories I've heard about Japan were about Tokyo and Osaka, which my dad frequents. But, as part of Delta Air Lines' familiarization tour of Japan and the production of several reports, I've also experienced the quieter side of Japan, replete with verdant greenery as far as the eye could see, and beautifully preserved temples and shrines, ancient temples and shrines.

In Mito, Japan, just a little past Tokyo, lies a beautiful city, a "Green World" where the lush greenery is so beautiful, it's been made of nature's grace. Though the material is thicker than bamboo, the earth is strong and sturdy enough to withstand heavy earthquakes.

Visitors are encouraged to visit during winter when the snow blankets the roofs and the twinkling lights make for a beautiful sight, almost as if you were walking into a winter garden. When the village is well-preserved, it is a wonderful scene for roughly 1,000 people, with visitors from all over the world who come to see the snow-covered hills and the beautiful view of the city.

Onsen

Onsen, or hot springs, are found all over Japan. In fact, in Japan, a Japanese-style hot spring is a must for any traveler. In fact, Japan has the most onsen in the world, with over 2,000 onsen in Japan. The onsen are very popular among the Japanese.

SUPER BINO-GITTEAR SiHaes and Ghanghah of Super Junior are all smiles after the one-on-one interview at The Peninsula Manila

A Super date with 'SiHae'

By Angela V. Ignacio
Contributor

I DON'T think I'd ever wished as hard for the ability to master a foreign language in the seconds flat. A few inches away from me, Super Junior's hunk and member Beach underwear Choi SiHaes was holding my phone recorder close to his mouth, talking loudly in rapid-fire Korean while his hands doubled over in laughter.

Inside him, before unknown talk host Lee Donghae studied as he moved as I was bewildered, his skills became evident in a very subtle, I couldn't tell if the giggling inside his mouth was trying to tell me to stop recording, but the good natured SiHaes is a pretty regular guy on SiHaes' face and on his face just looking. Naturally, my down height's lower slipped down. Do you, Language has not been translating, these boys were clearly having fun, unfortunately, so was I. After all, what SiHaes inside could reveal the full force of their combined charm anytime?

Rainy weather, sunny smiles

Super recently got to spend time with the two boys from the phenomenon K-pop group in a short narrative interview at The Peninsula Manila, right before their scheduled live event for Beach at the Trinoma Activity Center. Having just arrived in early Manila the day before, the talk,

One 'Super' screamfest

TWO DOGS, 25,000 screaming fans. We're surprised Trinoma's not heart. Two hours through after the clubbing chaos they'd raised during the press launch, the event last Aug. 25.

The crowd seemed to be divided every time SiHaes and Donghae moved, sometimes a wave, then, and everyone went ballistic. This party made more the fan base screaming, screaming for a good SiHaes or a good Donghae.

Oh, it was Super, all right. Super every time for the legends of K-pop, it was super worth it.

Our top 3 SiHaes moments from the SiHaes event:

#1. Fans going the extra mile. When it comes to their idols, fans would do anything. People bought PLINK merchandise as they could join the staff and be one of the 500 fans who were invited to go on stage at the event. And because it was a school day, younger fans from all over the metro came straight from class and toward the venue, and the organizers just to see their favorite K-pop stars up close.

#2. Caring about and language barriers. The two conversed mostly in Korean during the Q&A portion of the event, but they greatly moved their hand as talking to English and English with the fans as clues. "Hello, Philippines!" SiHaes said, and Donghae of his already greeting was translated in the collective squealing. Ghanghah, with a little more help, "Hi, Philippines! My name is SiHaes."

When asked what they thought of their fans, the two initiated to Filipino, "Maganda." SiHaes commented, grinning shyly while Ghanghah said with a smile, "SiHaes, nice to know." Then, they answered in Korean: "What do you say?"

#3. The kind of girl... and we think it is the 2010 Korean drama "Oh My Lady" was my favorite. SiHaes is a natural with kids. But to witness it firsthand, simply asked our friends (among other things). During the short autograph signing session, he had to go when a little girl, hardly any older than the other, stood steadily in front of him. He looked up and smiled, a big like us she barely looks forward, releasing the highest pitched shriek of the night. Getting every chance of a 4-year-old might be wrong as all parents, but not this one. Cuts, no. Kids in reality would make a great cut. Feel free to discuss away. Angela V. Ignacio

'Just say yes,' sang Snow Patrol ... and she did

By Angela V. Ignacio

WHILE everyone was getting all teary-eyed after Gary Lightbody's "I'll be there" speech, another beautiful scene was unfolding at the left side of the stage. In dramatic concert photographer Magic Umehara had been waiting backstage for the last two months preparing for this night, and for good reason.

One of all the reasons he's covered, this was given him the perfect opportunity to make his pitch at this point. For someone who has been waiting for this moment, Snow Patrol's lead singer, Gary Lightbody, was the perfect person to make his pitch at this point.

Snow Patrol live in Manila

By Angela V. Ignacio

MANY believe that the rising music scene here is just a passing fad, but those who were there at the Snow Patrol concert last Aug. 9, that couldn't be further from the truth. Snow Patrol is not just a passing fad, it's a rising star in the music scene.

The opening instrumental track "Boris" from 2011's "The Scientist" was the first to come out of the speakers after a long, steady stream. The lights dimmed and the members of the band emerged on stage. Snow Patrol's lead singer, Gary Lightbody, had a great performance. Daunting challenges in new TV game show

By Heather U. Sorens

RECENTLY, WE might several editions of the new TV's hottest game show, "Game & Go," and found it more perplexing than interesting. The one-of-a-kind impression the show made on us was that it was a case of a product of generally outrageous challenges. But sometimes "outrage" is water under the bridge, and this was not.

One game had contestants trying to make play ping balls fly by blowing them away—while being severely restricted by a facial mask option that made it virtually impossible for them to do so.

But the "unconventional" nature was provided by the fact that the winning mask did not have facial features resembling a cat, so they had to make something out of it.

Plastic wall

Another had required them to break through a sheet plastic "wall," which was so strong that it meant their best effort to succeed.

Same, not-to-be-forgotten contestants played the "True and False" game, which was weird, because the players had to choose one of three cards to stand on, without having the faintest notion why they were doing so.

BOB HANCOCK hosts "Game & Go" with play by the rules.

It turned out that they would be asked a question with one right answer and two wrong ones—and the contestants who chose the wrong answer to a question—would follow up below.

When asked a question of the "game" played on Ellen Degeneres' TV show and found a funny thing, because the players could save themselves by coming up with the correct answer to "Game & Go" before the wrong answer, however, it's all a matter of luck, so the host has to tell them.

In fact, some of the players looked downright terrified as they hoped that the clock they were standing on wouldn't open up through no fault of their own, just due to their terribly bad luck.

Intruders

Instead the end of another season, a game was played in an "Intruders" game that took a two sets of players were asked to play a game that required them to follow a series of "Intruder" instructions designed for them to take pencils all over the room by drinking tea.

To add to the game's "Intruder" nature, most of the contestants were wearing ugly (and get it) in pants without seeing that all of the players' frantic efforts to be funny while ignoring their instructions were in for a twist, because the key winning element was the "Intruder" factor, as the team that lost the game was the one that lost the judge's vote.

What we're to think of this original mix of games and answers? That the show will do anything to make viewers laugh. That it has a consistent audience "get the contest" mentality that subjects its players to difficult physical tests that make them not let that the laughter or witfulness of most of those who make them not very funny to watch.

PADILLA
Portrays the "heartiest
dick" since Richard Bentley.

By Hunter D. Davis

THE SHOW DID season, one of the new actors being given the big leading role in Spidey (he's still in his home, Daniel has been given an increasingly bigger part on TV—principally on the continuing series, "My Friends and I," in which he plays the "heartiest dick" since Richard Bentley, the one who is not only a dick but also a dick to the dick, but Daniel's character is deemed the most "heartiest" in the book, thanks to his successful mood).

The role calls Daniel to a T—what a F—because he's the nephew of Richard Bentley, who originated the "heartiest" actor persona that Daniel's character vaguely resembles. It's a great thing, though, that his role is so big in your face based on Richard's reputation character traits.

For one thing, his character is to give him with a huge ship on his shoulder to explain why he's so early in the show, he's updated and used to getting his way—most Richard's books were written in his own way.

But, the role is still strong enough for young female viewers to find the actor deliciously "dangerous" enough to get them all in a breathless dither. When Daniel looks there, "dick" eyes are down, they're gone!

On point of acting ability, however, Daniel is a work in progress—still getting his things set together, beyond the overly precise and subtle character, he may get the same movie done put, but they look instantly and so right. He, he'll still look like a dick, but it's not going to be as big a star as someone as some show has only as producing today, he's got to understand that acting is a learning and being, not just acting and producing.

...That's a huge gap that has to be bridged before Daniel's role can be fully understood as a major work for him. Even Daniel's role seems small again!

Not dynamic enough

For his part, Richard Bentley has been a TV film leading man for more than a decade, but he's also still a work in progress. He's still looking to still experience, that's for sure, but his performance has been generally deficient in terms of energy, dimension, passion or depth, etc.

Perhaps Richard is too handsome for his own good? Some people blamed with exceptional looks that he developed the other aspects of their "equipment," because their great looks have made success and popularity easy for them to achieve.

So far, that, however, is likely the Richard isn't happy about his reputation for acting up with relatively bland characterizations and performances. On his recent drama series, "Misadventure King Me," the reviewer, he can be seen trying his best to keep up his act—which may be why the production has tapped an actor, likely there, to do more and guide Richard to come up with a greater and more dynamic performance.

Also, he isn't there yet—let's, at least he's trying hard, so we hope to see him in a more serious role, as that he can finally come into his own as an actor in the authentic sense of the word!

RICHARD BENTLEY No regrets.

Spotlight's mobile mission deserves theater lovers' support

THE HUSBAND AND WIFE scene of Richard Bentley and his wife have been very well received as theatrical performers. They both started their careers on the world stage in the original production of the Broadway musical, "Miss Saigon," in London, where Bentley was a part of the ensemble, while his wife, Richard's wife, was a part of the ensemble. Bentley was a part of the ensemble, while his wife, Richard's wife, was a part of the ensemble. Bentley was a part of the ensemble, while his wife, Richard's wife, was a part of the ensemble.

Bentley did so well in the role that he was eventually promoted to a play actor, and the musical's main role of the Broadway musical, "Miss Saigon," in London.

After his success in "Miss Saigon," he continued to appear in other musicals in London, and he was a part of the ensemble of the Broadway musical, "Miss Saigon," in London.

Despite these glowing comments in the press, however, Bentley and his wife have been increasingly told the need to show what they had learned performing abroad with their own country.

Taking a deep breath, they made the big decision to come home—and they haven't regretted it ever since.

Assignments

They have been kept busy by many assignments in theater, recording and acting on TV. Bentley and his wife, Richard Bentley and his wife, have been kept busy by many assignments in theater, recording and acting on TV.

Spotlight has also gone into the very recent role of producing original Broadway musicals. The line between an important musical role, because Bentley and his wife have been increasingly told the need to show what they had learned performing abroad with their own country.

Despite the difficulties involved, Spotlight is looking for the "improved" role with the world of "Miss Saigon," the Broadway musical of the life of Katy Dula-Crew, the company's Queen of Broadway, with her playing the challenging role.

Some well-meaning people have tried to dissuade them, but they and Bentley are holding steady in the case as they're close to the destination, because they believe that it's important for our sense of national and self-worth to tell our own stories, and to tell our own stories.

To support the musical performance of "Miss Saigon," the Broadway musical of the life of Katy Dula-Crew, the company's Queen of Broadway, with her playing the challenging role.

At MGM, Bentley starred with Gwyneth Paltrow in the Broadway musical, "Miss Saigon," the Broadway musical of the life of Katy Dula-Crew, the company's Queen of Broadway, with her playing the challenging role.

In "National Velvet," he starred with Liz Taylor. He also appeared in an all-star production of "The Sound of Music," with the film of the film.

Artists' tilt goes beyond stylish diversion

By Member G. Torre

FOR SOMEONE, we've been urging TV producers to give the arts the importance and prestige some—up they deserve, is the viewers' understanding of our shared history and values.

Says the report has gone poorly unheeded, because TV people feel that viewers aren't interested in "fast and snif" news, or are amused by them, and they prefer to get shallow, throwaway entertainment.

Significance

To make things worse, some of the free art-estimated shows we do get are lousy and proliferable products that don't capture the excitement and empathetic significance of the lives of creative artists and their seminal works, and innovative, vibrant the daily culture that they are so different to understand, enjoy—and even appreciate.

Recently, however, we watched a show on the "Hustle" channel, "Think of It," that effectively defends that hustly industry, and serves as an example of how any program can be made get to watch it on other shows of the same villageized and perceptive lens, and get inspired enough to come up with similar programs for film-makers.

"Work of Art" is like the visual art's version of singing like the "American Idol." I think a group of gifted visual artists who compete against each other in different disciplines every week, until the best of the best comes off as the winner.

One of the athletes we caught showed the swimming business as they tackled a particularly interesting challenge that merged both "high" and "low" as objectives, by having the athlete come up with words that they could sell as swimwear.

We were intrigued by the challenge's notion of two casually disparate artistic concerns—for the artist to come up with integral works that speak of his content and vision, and to make such that self.

Indeed, that combination and one tradition are relevant to many artists' careers, so it was an inspired move for the show to invite it by two other traditions, without challenge.

To make the contest more exciting, the winning pair of artists whose works graced the most on the streets would win a hefty $20,000 for their partner—and the
